

Guide to website compliance

Guide to website compliance

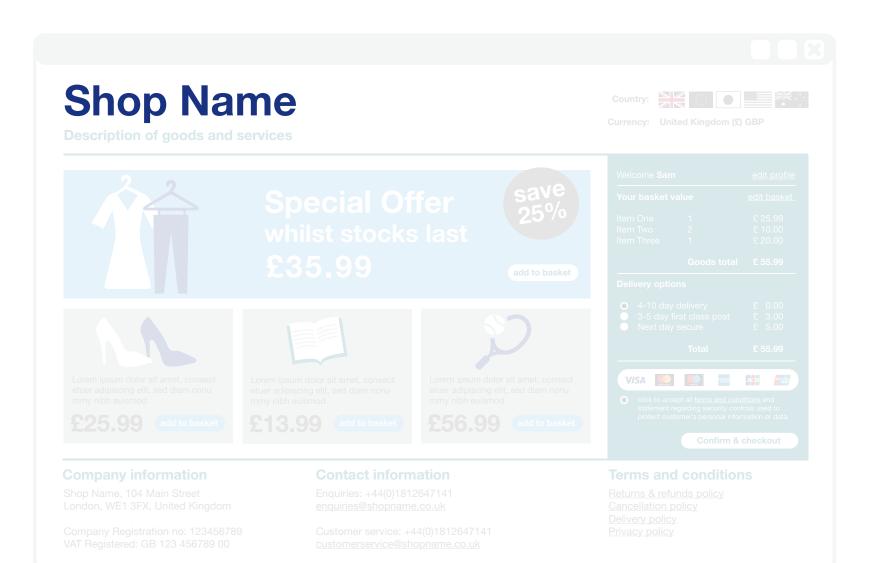

To start taking payments online for your business, you'll need to ensure that your website is fully compliant with the website requirements contained in this guide. Please note these are mandatory rules for eCommerce customers and set out by the card schemes.

Please be advised that the checklist is limited to card scheme requirements. Our approval of your website in this regard should not be relied upon by you as confirmation that your website is compliant with all Laws (as is required under your Terms of Service with Elavon). We would advise that you seek independent advice if you are unsure of the legal requirements that apply to an eCommerce website.

1. Include business name

This is your "Doing Business As" (DBA) name, also known as trading name.

Your business name should be the same as that will appear on the cardholder's statement.

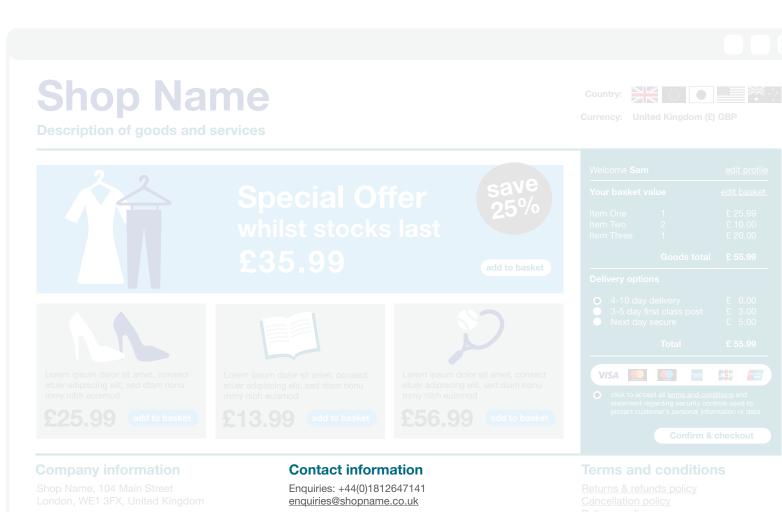

2. Include contact information

Display customer service contact information including email address or phone number.

In Europe if you deliver goods or services outside of your country, both a local and an internationally accessible telephone number is required.

If your business is in the UK and sells goods and services abroad, the international dialling code must be displayed next to the business contact number e.g. 020 3667 2312 should be displayed as +44 203 6672 312.

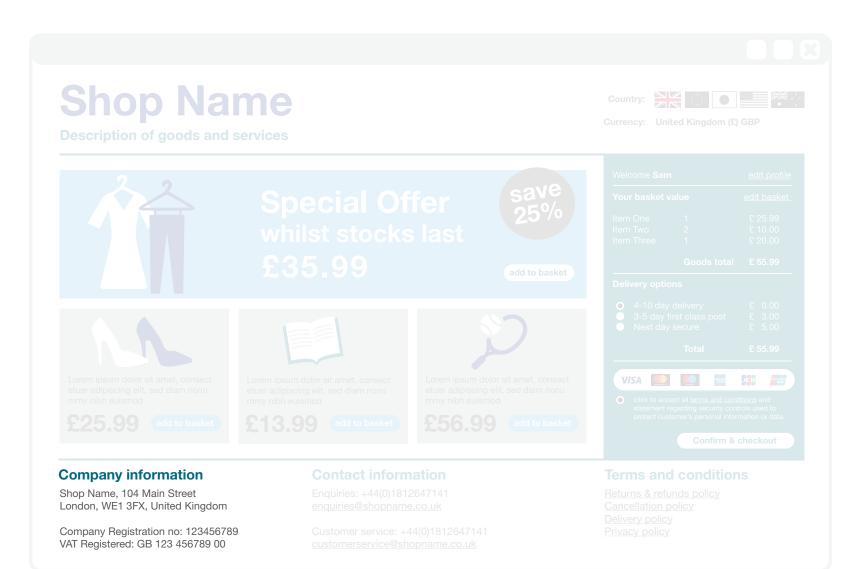

Customer service: +44(0)1812647141 customerservice@shopname.co.uk

3. Include country of origin

You have to clearly display the main address including the country from which your business operates or regards as it's main office, either on the check-out page or a page leading up to it.

Include the registered office address and place of registration.

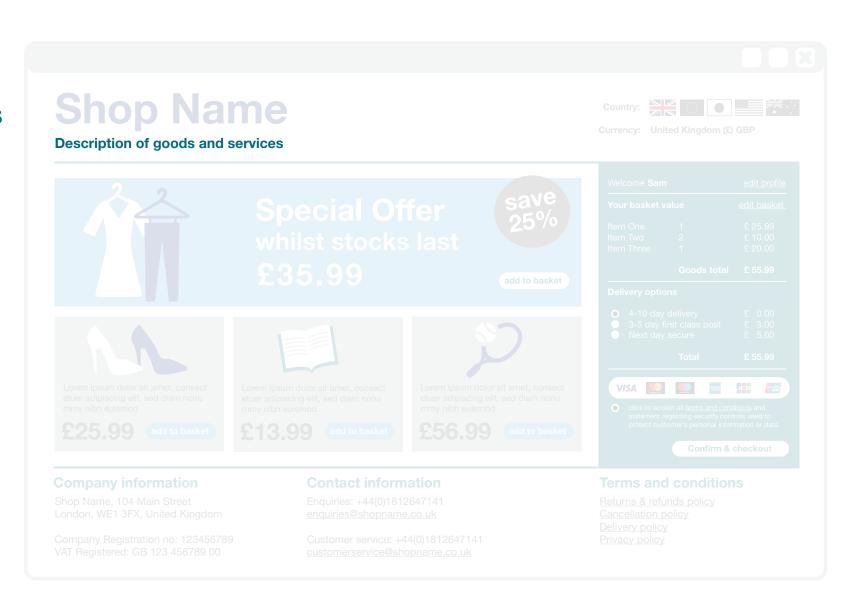

4. Include description of goods and services

Include a short description that clearly explains what your business offers to customers.

A short description should accompany each of the products or services you sell.

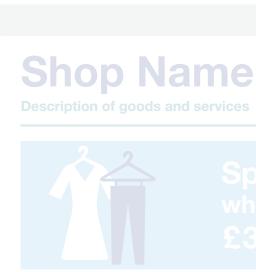

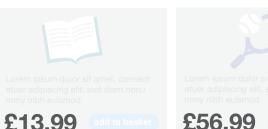

5. Display price information, including currency

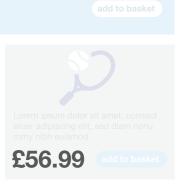

It's important to clearly show the relevant pricing and clear currency for each product or service.

Remember, many international customers prefer to pay in their home currency so by offering Elavon's Multi Currency Conversion service, you can offer pricing in over 100 currencies throughout your website.

If recurring payments will occur, the customer must be informed of this at the outset.

6. Include return, refund and cancellation policy

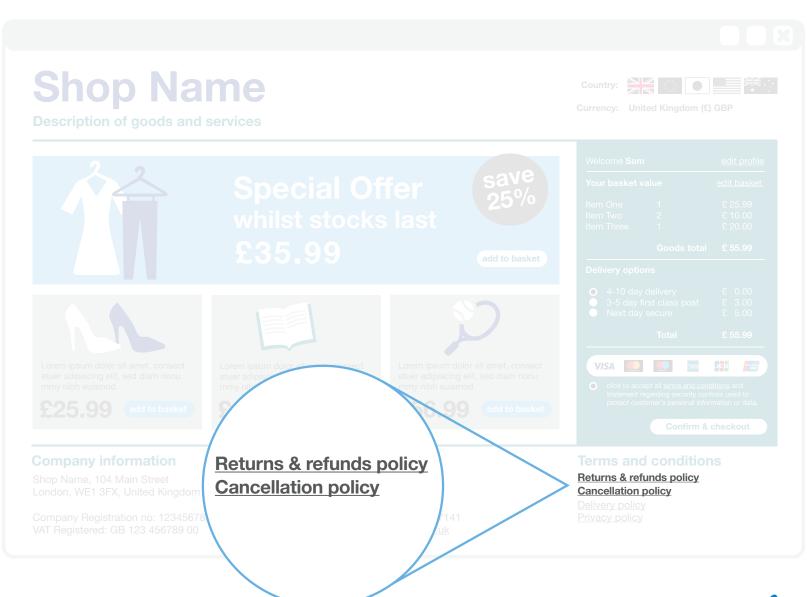

The policy has to include information on conditions that must be met, time limits and the procedure. It also should appear:

- in the sequence of pages before final checkout: or
- with a "click to accept" or other acknowledgement button or checkbox; or
- on the checkout screen, near the "submit" button; or
- in the terms and conditions (save for subscription payments of indeterminate length, which must be before the customer places the order).

If you offer a cancellation of a recurring purchase such as a subscription to a health club or a delivery of an item (delivered daily to weekly) you must tell your customers how to cancel their purchase.

For example: "You can cancel the purchase of <service> at any time before the cut off times relevant to your delivery day by visiting our home page, logging into your account and selecting the order vou'd like to cancel, then "cancel this order".

A sample policy is available on request.

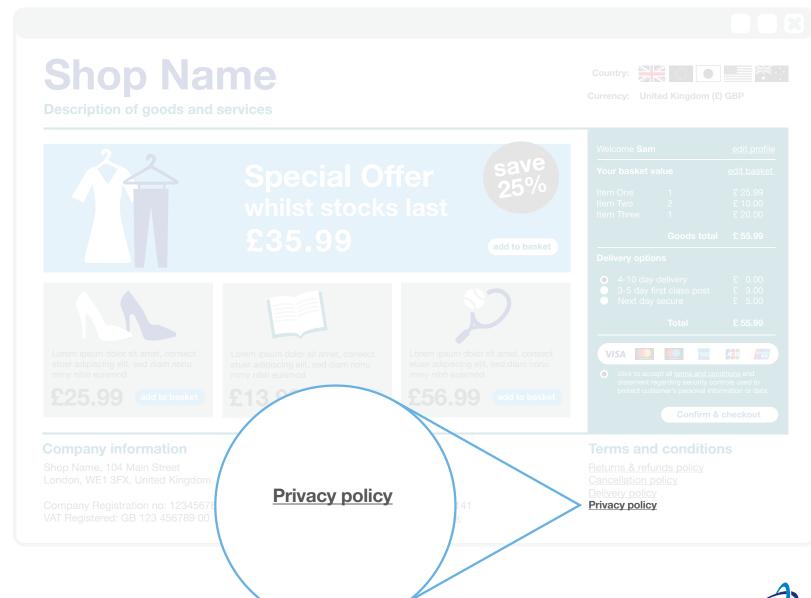

7. Include privacy policy

A statement regarding security controls used to protect customer's personal information or data (privacy policy).

This policy is a stand-alone policy. A sample policy is available on request.

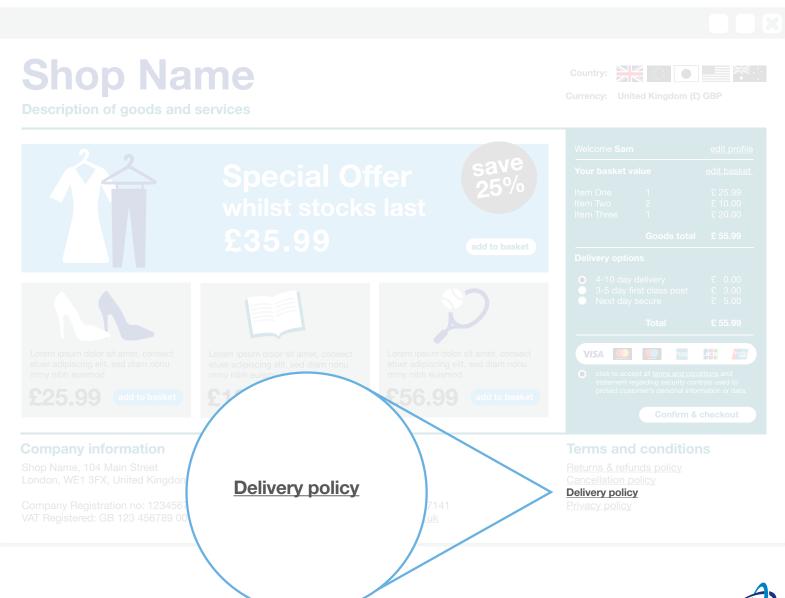

8. Include delivery policy including any export restrictions (if known)

- If you don't deliver goods to certain countries, you must list them. For example: "We supply all over the world, excluding the list of countries below which have trade embargoes", then you list the countries in reference
- Advise when goods are normally dispatched and how long it will take to reach your customer
- Advise what your customers can do if they don't receive the goods

A sample policy is available on request.

9. Include delivery methods

List your delivery methods, charges and timings, including policies for multiple shipments, if applicable.

- If there are differences in the delivery timings and charges for items, you should list them here
- Confirm how delivery will work to another country, to include timings and charges
- Confirm under which conditions a customer will expect multiple shipments. For example: "Orders may be delivered in one or more delivery or e.g. your items may arrive on different days or from different couriers, but you won't be charged for additional deliveries."

A sample policy is available on request.

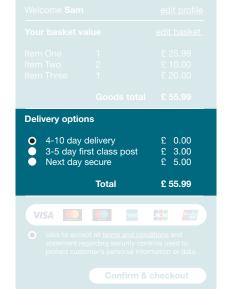

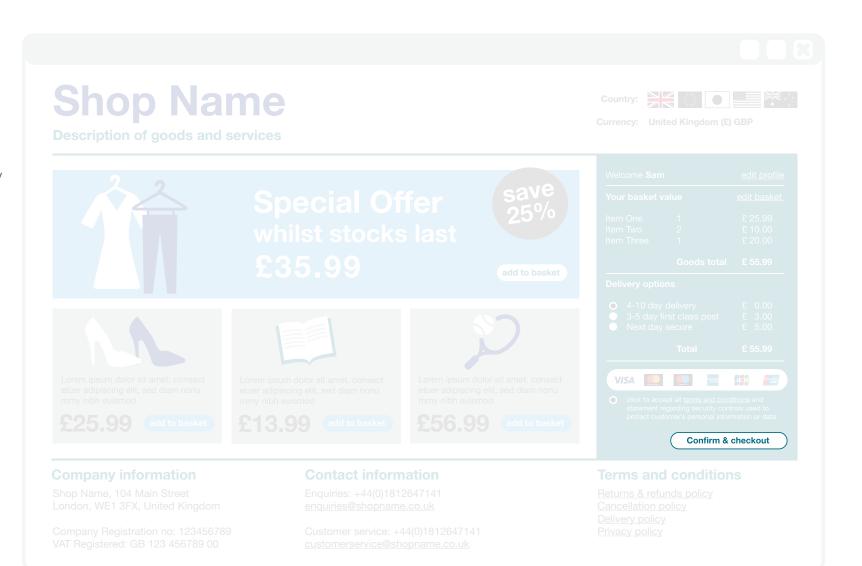

10. Include purchase confirmation

Before presenting the payment page to your customer, you should include a step where your customer can confirm that they would like to proceed with their purchase.

- Your customers must agree to buy goods from you
- Some examples you can use are: "secure checkout", "submit your order", "confirm your purchase"

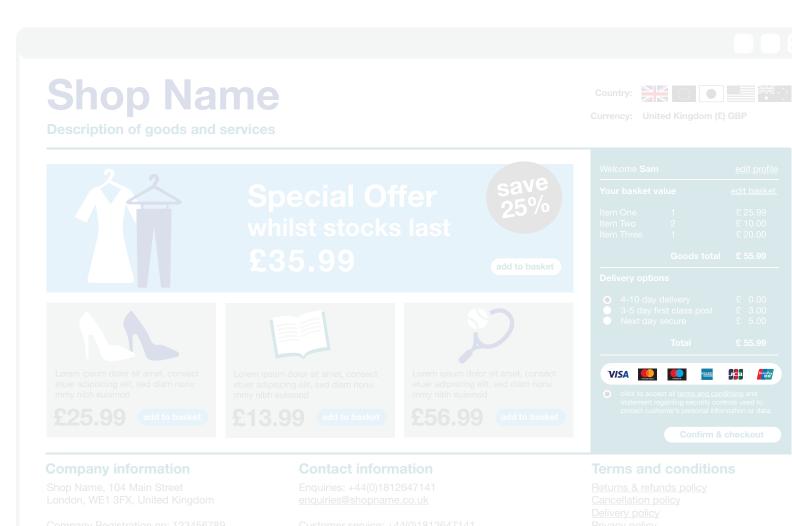

11. Include payment logos

Show logos of card brands you accept. Logos must be visible, all the same size, style and colour.

- Include the logo for any other payment methods you accept such as PayPal, Apple Pay, Sofort etc
- Black and white logos are acceptable
